Target's Viral 'Work From Home' Product Review Job Program Explained
What is Target's viral 'work from home' job?

Recently shares on March 30 by user Taylors Hustle - who frequently posts clips on the app highlighting ways to make additional income while working from home - a video showcasing the role has amassed over 30,000 views. The clip in question claims that the mass retailer has a program allowing users to earn anywhere from $3,000 to $5,000 while reviewing its products on social media from home. For clarity: the job described is not an actual on-staff role for Target. Rather, the position - which can be viewed through Target's Partners website - allows those signed up for the program to promote Target products on social media and earn up to 8% affiliate commission through sold items.

'TARGET has a program that allows you to work from home [and] choose your own [hours] making an extra 3-5k a month by promoting their products on social media...' Goddard's video reads. 'But you keep sitting on it instead of taking the leap. What's holding you back??'

What controversy has the job caused?
'What's holding me back is it's not guaranteed and I can't ever find the damn positions,' one user stated in the comments, replying to Goddard's questioning of what's holding others back from being part of the affiliate network.

Yes, the Target affiliate role is still currently available for users to register for on the retailer's Target Partners website. You can find more information on the web page, including its commission opportunities, new deals and promotions.
